Letter from Orange County. Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette: ORANGE, May 24, 1859.—Yesterday being Court day here, a goodly number of the yeomanry were out on the Court green to hear what the politicians had to say for themselves. We had a very interesting discussion between Messrs. Shackelford and Hun-1.41. Whig and Democratic electors for this discussion between these two gentlemen, Mr. Thomas was loudly called for, mounted the postrum and made a short but eloquent speech. He was particularly happy, and his speech seemed to please every one, and I Ant think that I am out of bounds when I say that he made at least ten converts. I certainly believe that he will carry the councerted, for she is right side up. You may think that I am writing merely for "Buncombe," but such is not the case, for it is my honest opinion, from all that I can learn from gentlemen from all parts of the County, HARRY.

Who, and what was it that originated the Republican party? Was it not, in truth, the Democracy? If, in contending for a just principle, the Democracy did not hesitate to let consequences take care of themselves, why should that party except to the Whigs acting in accordance with their own fiat justatia rule. The Whigs, in seeking to oust the Democracy, do so upon the basis of certain well defined principles, deemed essential to "the general welfare"-not for "spils," merely, as Mr. Prvor stated-and in their maintainance of these principles, it does not lie in the mouths of the Democrats to except thereto.

Mr. Pryor, also, desired to know if any one sociation. Respectfully and fraternally, William Henry Milliam . was so much of the Dogberry order as to write himself "an ass," by excepting to Mr. Letcher because of being unsound upon "negroology." Mr. P. well knew that while no Whig, for such cause, is subject to so write himself, the leaders of his party are justly entitled to do so. Having virtually called "the Prince Don John's brother a knave," because of his "negroology, they, presto, upon his nomination, shout, huzza, and represent him to be "a marvellously proper man upon the "goose.'

The Whigs, as we have before stated, do not regard Mr. Letcher as unreliable upon the Democracy subjecting itself to the Dogberry designation, by supporting a man for Governor who has not always, as now, regarded slavery as a blessing, after having 4 47 7 13 Firstqr., 7 5 42 g time and again, declared "let no such man reference to the opinions of Mr. Goggin, Mr. Scott, or any other person, has no pertinency to the issue.
